Report

Nowadays, the phrase "soft skills" is used frequently to refer to a person's personal transversal competences, including social aptitudes, language and communication skills, friendliness, the capacity to work well in a team, and other personality attributes that define interpersonal connections. Hard Skills, or the aptitude to accomplish a certain sort of task or activity, are generally thought of as complementing Soft Skills. When students apply for jobs of any kind, they must have the soft skills that are crucial for success in both their personal and professional lives. To foster the development of soft skills, the department of the college have planned a variety of activities.
